INTRODUCTION

The California Education Code provides that “[n]o person shall be subjected to discrimination on the basis of disability, gender, gender identity, gender expression, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or any [other constitutionally protected] characteristic” in California’s community colleges. Cal. Educ. Code § 66270. Consistent with this law, in 2020 the Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges adopted regulations expressing “their commitment to diversity and equity in fulfilling the [community college] system’s educational mission,” and that this commitment “should guide the administration of all programs in the California Community Colleges, consistent with all applicable state and federal laws and regulations.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, § 51200. In doing so, the Board’s goal was “ensuring the equal educational opportunity of all students.” Id. § 51201. To promote that goal, “the California Community Colleges embrace diversity among students, faculty, staff and the communities we serve as an integral part of our history, a recognition of the complexity of our present state, and a call to action for a better future.” Id. Plaintiff Daymon Johnson, an employee of the Kern Community College District, challenges the constitutionality of sections 51200 and 51201, and others adopted in April of this year that promote diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility. His claims are unavailing.

Plaintiff has not—and cannot—present evidence to show that the regulations in any way impose an immediate threat of harm to him or have directly impaired his ability to express himself freely. Nor is there any showing that Defendant Sonya Christian, the California Community Colleges Chancellor, has the authority to undertake any action to restrain Plaintiff’s First Amendment rights. And Plaintiff’s motion fails to present any argument or evidence that justifies the extraordinary remedy of finding state regulations duly promulgated to promote Fourteenth Amendment concepts of equity and inclusion for the benefit of the nearly two million students of California’s community colleges to be unconstitutional.

For these reasons, Chancellor Christian respectfully requests that this Court deny Plaintiff’s motion to enjoin enforcement of California Code of Regulations, title 5, sections 51200, 51201, 53425, 53601, 53602, and 53605.

BACKGROUND

A. California Community Colleges.

The California Community Colleges is the largest postsecondary system of higher education in the United States, with more than 1.8 million students attending one of 116 college campuses annually. Cal. Cmty. Colls., Students, <https://www.cccco.edu/Students> (last visited Aug. 18, 2023). With low tuition and a longstanding policy of full and open access, California’s community colleges were established under the principle that higher education should be available to everyone. See id., About Us, <https://www.cccco.edu/About-Us/Key-Facts> (last visited Aug. 18, 2023). As “the backbone of higher education in the state and the leading provider of career and workforce training in the country,” the community colleges are the most common entry point into collegiate degree programs in California; the primary system for delivering career technical education and workforce training; a major provider of adult education, apprenticeship, and English as a Second Language courses; and a source of lifelong learning opportunities for California’s diverse communities. Id. The California Equity in Higher Education Act (Cal. Educ. Code §§ 66250 et seq.) establishes California’s policy of affording all persons equal rights and opportunities in postsecondary educational institutions, including the California Community Colleges. Id. §§ 66251, 66261.5.

The Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges (the Board) sets policy and provides guidance for the 73 districts that constitute the postsecondary education system of community colleges. Cal. Educ. Code § 70900. The Legislature has granted the Board authority to develop and implement standards for classes, student academic requirements, and employment of academic and administrative staff. Id. §§ 70900; 70901(b). The Board’s strategic mission states that “[a]ll people have the opportunity to reach their full educational potential The Colleges embrace diversity in all its forms All people have the right to access quality higher education.” Resolution of the Board of Governors No. 2017-01 (January 17, 2017), <https://tinyurl.com/yc8bw6z9> (last visited Aug. 18, 2023). To further those goals, the California Community Colleges are unequivocally committed “to diversity, equity, and inclusion that is serving as a model to other systems in California and nationally.” Cal. Cmty. Colls.,

3 Under its authority from the Legislature, and consistent with its role of providing 4 “leadership and direction” to the California Community Colleges, the Board has promulgated 5 regulations to implement “aspects of state and federal anti-discrimination laws intended to 6 prevent unlawful discrimination in employment.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, § 53000. The 7 regulations “provide[] direction to community college districts related to the incorporation of 8 evidence-based and equity-minded practices into existing recruitment, hiring, retention, and 9 promotion activities to promote equal employment opportunities.” Id. As part of providing that 10 direction, and furthering its “goal of ensuring the equal educational opportunity of all students, 11 the California Community Colleges embrace diversity among students, faculty, staff and the 12 communities we serve as an integral part of our history, a recognition of the complexity of our 13 present state, and a call to action for a better future.” Id. § 51201(a). This goal is intended to 14 “guide the administration of all programs in the California Community Colleges, consistent with 15 all applicable state and federal laws and regulations.” Id. § 51200.

16 The Board appoints a chief executive officer—the Chancellor—who exercises the duties 17 and responsibilities delegated to her by the Board. Cal. Educ. Code § 71090(b). Defendant 18 Sonya Christian has served as Chancellor since June 2023. As the Board’s chief executive, the 19 Chancellor’s duties are wholly derivative of, and therefore no more expansive than, the Board’s 20 authority. Id. § 70901(d) (Board may delegate a power to the Chancellor); § 71090(b)
 21 (Chancellor shall execute the responsibilities designated to her by the Board). The Chancellor’s 22 Office is responsible for carrying out the policies of the Board, including the development of 23 fiscal plans, a legislative agenda, a budget for the community college system, and the execution 24 of grants to community college districts to carry out statewide programs in furtherance of the 25 Board’s policies. See, generally, id. §§ 71090-71906. But neither the Chancellor nor the Board 26 has any role in hiring, disciplining, or terminating district staff, or in establishing “employment 27 practices” for community college professors. Id. § 70902(a)(1) (“Every community college 28 district shall be under the control of a board of trustees,” and this “governing board of each community college district” shall “maintain, operate, and govern” community colleges under their jurisdiction.); see also id. §70902(b)(4) (local districts shall “[e]stablish employment practices, salaries, and benefits for all employees not inconsistent with the laws of this state.”).

Neither the Board nor the Chancellor has the authority to administer local community college campuses; that authority lies with the community college districts governed by locally elected boards of trustees. Specifically, the Board’s primary purpose is to provide “leadership and direction” while maintaining, “to the maximum degree permissible, local authority and control in the administration” of local community colleges by their districts. Cal. Educ. Code § 70901(a). Consistent with that “local authority and control,” community college districts are responsible for “employ[ing] and assign[ing] all personnel not inconsistent with the minimum standards adopted by the board of governors and establish[ing] employment practices, salaries and benefits for all employees not inconsistent with the laws of this state.” Id. § 70902(b)(4).

B. Plaintiff’s Allegations.

In his First Amended Complaint, Johnson argues that he “fears” discipline or termination as a Bakersfield Community College professor if he refuses to comply with the Kern Community College District’s diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility policy. (First Am. Compl. 25-26, 33, ECF No. 8.) Johnson asserts that the District’s application of California Educational Code sections 87732 and 87735 to him (which set forth the grounds for termination or suspension) violates his First Amendment rights. (ECF No. 8 at 33.) He further challenges the District’s application of District Board Policy 3050, alleging that its application causes him to “refrain from speaking and has altered his speech for fear of further investigation, discipline, and termination.” (ECF No. 8 at 35.)¹ Finally, in his fourth and fifth causes of action against all Defendants—including Chancellor Christian—Johnson seeks to enjoin California Code of Regulations, title 5, sections 51200, 51201, 53425, 53601, 53602, and 53605, alleging that they “impose [an] official political ideology” and are “unconstitutional on their face and as applied to Professor Johnson.” (ECF No. 8 at 36-39.)

¹ Johnson alleges that the Kern Community College District Board Policy 3050 is maintained “in compliance with” the Board’s “Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Competencies and Criteria” issued May 5, 2023, implying that the District Board Policy was issued in response to the Competencies and Criteria. (ECF No. 8 at 12, ¶ 58.) However, District Board Policy 3050 was first adopted in 2017. (Decl. J. Russell Supp. Opp’n Mot. for Prelim. Inj. Exs. A, B.) And the District Board adopted the current iteration of BP 3050 on January 20, 2022, over a year before the challenged regulations and the Competencies and Criteria were issued. (Id., Exs. C-E.) Johnson acknowledges that the regulations were adopted April 16, 2023 (ECF No. 8 at 7, ¶ 38), and that the Competencies and Criteria were issued May 5, 2023. (Id. at 9, ¶ 42.)

STANDARD OF REVIEW

“A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right.” Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008); see also Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 U.S. 968, 972 (1997) (a preliminary injunction “is an extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries the burden of persuasion.”). “A preliminary injunction . . . is not a preliminary adjudication on the merits but rather a device for preserving the status quo.” Sierra On-Line, Inc. v. Phoenix Software, Inc., 739 F.2d 1415, 1422 (9th Cir. 1984). The purpose of a preliminary injunction is to protect the moving party from a likely “irreparable loss of rights” until the court may render its final decision on the merits. Id. “At a minimum, a plaintiff seeking preliminary injunctive relief must demonstrate that it will be exposed to irreparable harm,” and “[s]peculative injury does not constitute irreparable injury sufficient to warrant granting a preliminary injunction.” Caribbean Marine Servs. Co., Inc. v. Baldrige, 844 F.2d 668, 674 (9th Cir. 1988) (citations omitted). Accordingly, when—like here—the moving party seeks “mandatory preliminary relief”—that is, relief that changes the status quo as it existed before the conflict giving rise to the case—such relief “is subject to heightened scrutiny and should not be issued unless the facts and law clearly favor the moving party.” Dahl v. HEM Pharms. Corp., 7 F.3d 1399, 1403 (9th Cir. 1993).

“[T]he basis for injunctive relief in the federal courts has always been irreparable injury and the inadequacy of legal remedies.” Weinberger v. Romero-Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 312 (1982). A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must demonstrate “that he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. “The first factor under Winter is the most important,” and a court need not consider the remaining three elements where the plaintiff fails to show a likelihood of success on the merits. Garcia v. Google, Inc., 786 F.3d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 2015) (en banc). And when

1 “the impact of an injunction reaches beyond the parties, carrying with it a potential for public 2 consequences, the public interest will be relevant to whether the district court grants the 3 preliminary injunction.” Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1139 (9th Cir. 2009).

4 Where the government is a party, the balance of equities factor merges with the public 5 interest factor. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014). But a 6 plaintiff must still satisfy all four elements, and the Winter test does not “collapse into the merits” 7 of a First Amendment claim. See DISH Network Corp. v. FCC, 653 F.3d 771, 776 (9th Cir.
8 2011).

9 ARGUMENT

10 I. PLAINTIFF LACKS STANDING TO SEEK EXTRAORDINARY RELIEF.

11 As a threshold matter, Johnson lacks standing to bring his claims against Chancellor 12 Christian because the regulations he seeks to have enjoined neither apply directly to him nor 13 create any imminent risk that Johnson will be harmed by Chancellor Christian or the California 14 Community Colleges.

15 To establish Article III standing, “a plaintiff must show (i) that he suffered an injury in fact 16 that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent; (ii) that the injury was likely caused by 17 the defendant; and (iii) that the injury would likely be redressed by judicial relief.” TransUnion
18 LLC v. Ramirez, — U.S. —, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2203 (2021). Establishing the “injury in fact” 19 element of standing is a “rigid constitutional requirement” that a plaintiff must meet “to invoke a 20 federal court’s jurisdiction,” even where, as in the present case, the plaintiff brings a “pre-21 enforcement” First Amendment challenge. Lopez v. Candaele, 630 F.3d 775, 786 (9th Cir. 2010).
22 In such pre-enforcement cases, to determine if a plaintiff faces a credible threat of enforcement—23 and has thus suffered an “actual injury”—courts examine “1) the likelihood that the law will be 24 enforced against the plaintiff; 2) whether the plaintiff has shown, ‘with some degree of concrete 25 detail,’ that she intends to violate the challenged law; and 3) whether the law even applies to the 26 plaintiff.” Italian Colors Rest. v. Becerra, 878 F.3d 1165, 1172 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Lopez v.
27 Candaele, 630 F.3d at 786). In that regard, “there must be a genuine threat of imminent 28 prosecution” to establish standing. Unified Data Servs., LLC v. Fed. Trade Comm’n, 39 F.4th

1 1200, 1210 (9th Cir. 2022); see also Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 42 (1971) (“[P]ersons 2 having no fears of state prosecution except those that are imaginary or speculative, are not to be 3 accepted as appropriate plaintiffs.”).

4 Johnson cannot make the requisite “clear showing” of an injury in fact and thus lacks 5 standing to challenge the regulations on two separate, yet related, bases: 1) the regulations do not 6 apply directly to Johnson; and 2) Johnson has not—and cannot—show that he faces an imminent 7 risk of any harm at the hands of Chancellor Christian or the Board as a result of the regulations.

8 A. The Challenged Regulations Apply to California’s Community College 9 Districts, Rather than Johnson.

10 The regulations at issue do not apply to Johnson directly. Rather, they direct community 11 college districts to consider diversity, equity, inclusion, and access in the employment processes, 12 as implemented through district policy and collective bargaining. A plaintiff’s “claims of future 13 harm lack credibility when the challenged speech restriction by its terms is not applicable to the 14 plaintiff[.]” Lopez v. Candaele, 630 F.3d at 788; see also Leonard v. Clark, 12 F.3d 885, 888-89 15 (9th Cir. 1993); Barke v. Banks, 25 F.4th 714, 719-20 (9th Cir. 2022).

16 The Ninth Circuit’s decision in Barke is instructive. There, the plaintiffs—who were 17 “elected members of local California government bodies, including city councils, school boards, 18 and community college and special purpose districts”—challenged California Government Code 19 section 3550. Barke v. Banks, 25 F.4th at 716-17. Section 3550 provides that “[a] public 20 employer shall not deter or discourage public employees . . . from becoming or remaining 21 members of an employee organization.” The plaintiffs alleged that the law violated their First 22 Amendment rights and chilled their speech based on a fear that the California Public Employment 23 Relations Board would “erroneously attribute” their personal statements concerning union 24 membership to their governmental employers, “thereby causing their employers to be sanctioned 25 and damaging [the plaintiffs’] reputations as a result.” Id. at 717-18. Affirming the district 26 court’s order dismissing the case, the Ninth Circuit held that because section 3550 did not apply 27 to the plaintiff or “the speech Plaintiffs allege they want to engage in,” they “failed to 28

1 demonstrate that they ha[d] suffered an injury in fact sufficient to establish their standing to 2 pursue their pre-enforcement challenge.” Id. at 720-21.

3 Here, as in Barke, the regulations in question do not apply directly to Johnson. As 4 discussed above, the California Community Colleges Board provides “leadership and direction” 5 to community college districts, while allowing those districts to maintain “to the maximum 6 degree permissible, [their] local authority and control in the administration” of institutions within 7 their district. Cal. Educ. Code § 70901(a). Consistent with this principle, the regulations at issue 8 operate upon community college districts, not upon individual district employees who remain 9 under the supervision of their employer-districts.²

10 Because the regulations do not apply directly to Johnson, any claim by Johnson that he will 11 suffer future harm as a result of the regulations fails.

12 B. Plaintiff Does Not Face an “Imminent Risk” of Harm Under the 13 Regulations.

14 Johnson cannot show that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm absent a preliminary 15 injunction because he faces no “imminent” risk of any action by Chancellor Christian for 16 expressing his alleged viewpoints concerning diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility, even 17 viewpoints that are potentially in conflict with the California Community Colleges’ goals. To 18 challenge the prospective enforcement of a law or regulation, Plaintiff must establish “a realistic 19 danger of sustaining a direct injury as a result of the statute’s operation or enforcement.” Babbitt 20 v. United Farm Workers Nat’l Union, 442 U.S. 289, 298, (1979). “Irreparable” injury is an 21 “indispensable” requirement for a preliminary injunction. D.T. v. Sumner Cnty. Schs., 942 F.3d 22 324, 326 (6th Cir. 2019). “A plaintiff must do more than merely allege imminent harm sufficient

23 ² Johnson challenges the Board’s “Vision for Success,” which further articulates the 24 Board’s aspirations for district policies. (ECF No. 8 at 29-30, ¶ 136, 144.) However, only 25 regulations adopted through the formal regulatory process are binding on districts. (See Cal.
 26 Cmty. Colls., Procedures and Standing Orders of the Board of Governors (Dec. 2022) ch. 2, § 27 200, https://www.cccco.edu/-/media/CCCCO-Website/docs/procedures-standing-28 orders/december-2022-procedures-standing-ordersv2-a11y.pdf?la=en&hash=FF692A0AE8ACC8FE6BB2A4D75018302005A8A4D6 (“Neither the Board nor the Chancellor may administer or enforce any regulation, as defined by section 202, paragraph (d), unless that regulation is adopted in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter”). Similar to the regulations, Board communications like the “Vision for Success” (first drafted in 2017) do not apply directly to Johnson.

1 to establish standing; a plaintiff must demonstrate immediate threatened injury as a prerequisite to 2 preliminary injunctive relief.” Caribbean Marine Servs. Co., Inc. v. Baldrige, 844 F.2d at 674
 3 (citation omitted) (emphasis in original). When determining whether the “irreparable injury” 4 requirement is met, the Ninth Circuit considers, among other things, “whether the prosecuting 5 authorities have communicated a specific warning or threat to initiate proceedings.” Thomas v.
 6 Anchorage Equal Rts. Comm’n, 220 F.3d 1134, 1139 (9th Cir. 2000) (en banc).

7 Chancellor Christian is not a prosecuting authority. The State’s community college districts 8 are legally distinct entities from both the State and Board. Community college districts are 9 independent local government entities controlled by a locally elected board of trustees, each with 10 the power to sue and be sued. Cal. Educ. Code § 72000(a) (“The district and its governing board 11 may sue and be sued, and shall act in accordance with Section 70902.”). Education Code section 12 70902 enumerates the authorities and duties of local districts and their governing board of 13 trustees, and specifically requires that “the governing board of each community college district 14 shall . . . employ and assign all personnel not inconsistent with the minimum standards adopted by 15 the board of governors and establish employment practices, salaries and benefits for all 16 employees not inconsistent with the laws of this state.” Id. § 70902(b)(4) (emphasis added). And 17 it is each district that is responsible for “adopt[ing] policies for the evaluation of employee 18 performance, including tenure reviews, that requires demonstrated, or progress toward, 19 proficiency in the locally-developed [diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility] competencies 20 or those published by the Chancellor pursuant to section 53601.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, § 53602.

21 The distinct roles and different duties of the Board and local districts were examined in 22 First Interstate Bank of California v. State of California, 197 Cal. App. 3d 627 (1987). There, 23 First Interstate Bank attempted to hold the State and the Board of Governors responsible when a 24 community college district failed to make lease payments in connection with a lease-purchase 25 agreement. First Interstate contended that the construction and maintenance of school buildings 26 is a sovereign and nondelegable duty of the Board, and that the district was acting merely in an 27 agency capacity on the project.
 28

1 The California Court of Appeal held that the district was a separate entity, and neither the 2 State nor the Board could be held liable for any acts undertaken by a community college district, 3 the community college, or the college's employees. First Interstate Bank, 197 Cal. App. 3d at 4 633. The court further noted that neither the state Constitution nor any statute provides that a 5 district can undertake any action at the State or Board's behest. "[T]he fact that a state agency is 6 created by statute to discharge a duty constitutionally imposed on the state does not transmute the 7 agency into 'the state,' nor render the state liable for its acts under a general theory of respondeat 8 superior." Id. Recognizing that "liability is fixed on the public entity whose employee causes the 9 injury," the court found the State and the Board were not liable. Id., at 634; see also Johnson v.
 10 San Diego Unified Sch. Dist., 217 Cal. App. 3d 692, 699 (1990) [confirming the "separate distinct 11 character of the school district as distinguished from the state educational entities"].)

12 Neither the Board nor Chancellor Christian employs, evaluates, promotes, or disciplines 13 district staff or college professors, including Johnson. Instead, the Board merely sets minimum 14 hiring standards for personnel hired by each district. Cal. Educ. Code § 70901(b)(1)(B). All 15 decisions regarding employee hiring, employment practices, performance evaluation, and 16 potential termination are the responsibility of the district. Id. Thus, the Board and Chancellor 17 Christian cannot and will not take any action against Johnson concerning his speech. He faces no 18 "imminent threat" of action by either the Board or Chancellor Christian, nor does he face any 19 "actual injury" resulting from the regulations. Because Johnson's allegations lack this essential 20 element allowing him to seek injunctive relief, his motion should be denied.

21 22 II. PLAINTIFF HAS NOT SHOWN A LIKELIHOOD OF SUCCESS ON THE MERITS THAT THE REGULATIONS ARE UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

23 Johnson's request that the Court preliminarily enjoin the regulations further fails because he 24 has not shown a likelihood of success in establishing that the regulations are unconstitutional.
 25 The challenged regulations do not violate Johnson's First Amendment rights for at least two 26 reasons: (1) the regulations do not restrict Johnson's speech, but rather express the Board's own 27 principles regarding diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility; and (2) the regulations are 28 constitutionally permissible non-discrimination policies that "do[] not target speech or discriminate on the basis of its content, but instead serve to remove access barriers imposed against groups that have historically been excluded.” Alpha Delta Chi-Delta Chapter v. Reed, 648 F.3d 790, 801 (9th Cir. 2011).

A. The Board Is Entitled to Express Its Ideals Regarding Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Accessibility, and the Challenged Regulations Serve This Purpose.

By their plain language, the regulations do not restrict the free speech of any employee in their individual capacity, or infringe upon any faculty member’s academic freedom, including Johnson’s. Rather, the regulations set forth the Board’s policy objective that district evaluation policies and practices reflect its ideals and principles regarding diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility. Accordingly, the regulations Johnson challenges do not implicate the First Amendment.

The California Community Colleges Board is entitled to express its ideals and principles concerning diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility, particularly when that expression does not regulate another person’s speech. Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of the Univ. of Virginia, 515 U.S. 819, 828, 833 (1995) (although “the government may not regulate speech based on its substantive content . . . when the State is the speaker, it may make content-based choices”); see also Downs v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist., 228 F.3d 1003, 1013 (9th Cir. 2000). In Downs, the school district issued “policies and practices” that supported “Educating for Diversity,” and provided posters and materials supporting Gay and Lesbian Awareness Month to be posted on school bulletin boards. Downs, 228 F.3d at 1005-06. The district court rejected the plaintiff teacher’s claim that the district violated his First Amendment rights when it refused to allow him to post contrary messages on the bulletin boards. Id. at 1008. In affirming that ruling, the Ninth Circuit held that governmental entities “may decide not only to talk about gay and lesbian awareness and tolerance in general, but also to advocate such tolerance if it so decides, and restrict the contrary speech of one of its representatives.” Id. at 1014, citing Rust v. Sullivan, 500 U.S. 173, 194 (1991).

Bair v. Shippensburg Univ., 280 F. Supp. 2d 357 (M.D. Pa. 2003), illustrates the California Community Colleges’ right to express guiding principles concerning diversity and equity. In

1 Bair, university students sought to preliminarily enjoin enforcement of the following policies, on 2 the ground that they violated the students' First Amendment rights: (1) a portion of the Preamble
3 to the University Catalog which stated that "[t]he university will strive to protect [the freedoms 4 necessary for the pursuit of truth and knowledge] if they are not inflammatory or harmful towards 5 others," and (2) a portion of the University's Racism and Cultural Diversity Statement which 6 provided, "[i]t is the unequivocal position of Shippensburg University to prohibit racism/ethnic 7 intimidation and harassment; and to affirm cultural diversity, social justice and equality." Id. at 8 362-363. The Bair court denied the students' motion for preliminary injunction as to both of 9 these policies on the ground that neither policy implicated First Amendment concerns, as "the 10 cited language seeks to advise the student body of the University's ideals and is therefore 11 aspirational rather than restrictive." Id. at 370-371.

12 As in Bair, the challenged regulations do not implicate Johnson's First Amendment rights.
13 Taken together, the regulations affirm the Board's "official position" to "embrace diversity 14 among students, faculty, staff and the communities we serve" (Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, §§ 51200 15 and 51201), and direct the State's community college districts to create their own employment 16 policies consistent with this goal. Id. §§ 53425, 53601, 53602, and 53603. Critically, none of the 17 challenged regulations include any enforcement mechanisms by which any employee of a 18 community college district (including Johnson) can be punished by the Board or the Chancellor 19 for engaging in speech contrary to the ideals set forth in the regulations, further bolstering the 20 conclusion that the regulations are an expression of the Board's own principles, rather than 21 mechanisms by which the Board or the Chancellor can or will restrict Johnson's individual 22 speech.

23 To maintain his action, Johnson is required to show that his expression of allegedly 24 protected speech will be a substantial or motivating factor in an adverse employment action. Eng 25 v. Cooley, 552 F.3d 1062, 1071 (9th Cir. 2009) ("[T]he plaintiff bears the burden of showing the 26 state took adverse employment action . . . [and that the] speech was a substantial or motivating 27 factor in the adverse action.") (internal quotation marks omitted). Because the regulations do not 28 proscribe speech, Johnson's action against Chancellor Christian necessarily fails. Dahlia v.

Rodriguez, 735 F.3d 1060, 1067 n.4 (9th Cir. 2013) (en banc) (“[F]ailure to meet any one of [the Eng factors] is fatal to the plaintiff’s case.”).

Johnson’s reliance upon Janus v. Am. Fed’n of State, Cnty., and Mun. Emps., Couns. 31, — U.S. —, 138 S. Ct. 2448 (2018) is misplaced. In Janus, a state employee declined to join his unit’s union because he “oppose[d] many of the public policy positions that it advocate[d],” but was nevertheless required under his unit’s collective-bargaining agreement to pay monthly nonmember dues to the union. Id. at 2461. The Supreme Court held that such compulsory payment of nonmember dues “violates the free speech rights of nonmembers by compelling them to subsidize private speech on matters of substantial public concern.” Id. at 2460. Here, in contrast, the regulations at issue do not require Johnson to “subsidize” any entity’s private speech (or, indeed, to do anything at all, because the regulations do not apply to Johnson directly), nor do they otherwise provide for any adverse action to be taken against Johnson by the Board or Chancellor Christian.

Because Johnson cannot establish that his First Amendment rights are or will be infringed by the Board’s regulations, he is not “likely to succeed on the merits” of his claim that the regulations are unconstitutional, as required under Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. Accordingly, Johnson is not entitled to an order enjoining the challenged regulations.

B. The Regulations Are Constitutionally Permissible Non-Discrimination Policies.

Johnson further fails to establish a likelihood of success on the merits because the challenged regulations aim to “eliminate . . . barriers to equity” in community colleges (Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, § 51201(c)), rather than to suppress any individual’s speech. “As the Supreme Court has made clear, antidiscrimination laws intended to ensure equal access to the benefits of society serve goals ‘unrelated to the suppression of expression’ and are neutral as to both content and viewpoint.” Alpha Delta Chi-Delta Chapter v. Reed, 648 F.3d at 801 (quoting Roberts v. U.S. Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 623–24 (1984)); see also Hurley v. Irish–Am. Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Grp. of Boston, 515 U.S. 557, 572 (1995) (public accommodations law forbidding discrimination based on sexual orientation and other grounds did not, “on its face, target speech or discriminate on the basis of its content, the focal point of its prohibition being rather on the act of

1 discriminating against individuals in the provision of publicly available goods, privileges, and 2 services on the proscribed grounds.”).

3 In Alpha Delta Chi, the Ninth Circuit upheld the constitutionality of San Diego State 4 University’s nondiscrimination policy, which stated that “[u]nderlying San Diego State’s 5 educational goals are basic values that include . . . freedom from discrimination” and affirmed its 6 “positive commitment toward diversity.” Alpha Delta Chi, 648 F.3d at 799. The policy 7 encouraged student organizations “to make a conscious effort to undertake recruitment efforts to 8 ensure diversity [and] take steps to reach populations currently underrepresented.” Id. The 9 policy further “challenged” the organizations “to express yourself in a manner that promotes and 10 maintains the ideals of respect, equality, diversity, and freedom from harassment.” Id. This 11 nondiscrimination policy was challenged by Christian student groups that were denied official 12 recognition in San Diego State’s student organization program because of their exclusionary 13 practices. Id. 795-96. Relying on Supreme Court authority, the Ninth Circuit rejected these 14 claims, holding that the nondiscrimination policy did not “target speech or discriminate on the 15 basis of its content, but instead serve[d] to remove access barriers imposed against groups that 16 have historically been excluded.” Id. at 801.

17 Similar to the nondiscrimination policy in Alpha Delta Chi, the regulations Johnson 18 challenges do not “target speech or discriminate on the basis of its content,” but instead seek to 19 “remove access barriers imposed against groups that have historically been excluded.” Alpha 20 Delta Chi, 648 F.3d at 801. The regulations “acknowledge that institutional racism, 21 discrimination, and biases exist,” and that the Board’s “commitment to diversity requires that we 22 strive to eliminate those barriers to equity and that we act deliberately to create a safe, inclusive, 23 and anti-racist environment” that “offers equal opportunity for all.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 5, § 24 51201(c) and (d).

25 Because the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit have held that such policies do not violate 26 the First Amendment, Johnson’s motion to enjoin the challenged regulations should be denied.

III. PLAINTIFF CANNOT SHOW THAT THE BALANCE OF HARMS AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST SUPPORT AN INJUNCTION.

Johnson’s claims of injury from the Board’s promulgation of its aspirational regulations are based on an alleged denial of his First Amendment rights. (ECF No. 8 at 6:1-7:24.) Because his constitutional challenge to the regulations fails, Johnson cannot demonstrate that he will be injured, let alone irreparably so, in the absence of an injunction against the regulations. See Goldie’s Bookstore, Inc. v. Superior Court, 739 F.2d 466, 472 (9th Cir. 1984). But even if Johnson could state a constitutional claim challenging the regulations—which he cannot—his motion should still be denied, as the crucial public interest served by the challenged regulations (namely, ensuring equal access to the California Community Colleges for nearly two million students) outweighs the nominal infringement of speech Johnson alleges he may experience as a result of the regulations.

When the government is the opposing party, the last two factors of the preliminary injunction analysis—the balance of equities and public interest—merge. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014). To analyze these factors, a court must “balance the competing claims of injury and must consider the effect on each party of the granting or withholding of the requested relief,” paying “particular regard for the public consequences in employing the extraordinary remedy of injunction.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 24 (citation omitted).

“A State enjoys broad authority to create rights of public access on behalf of its citizens,” and has the constitutional authority to enact legislation prohibiting invidious discrimination. Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 624–26 (1984). Specifically regarding education, the Supreme Court has held educational policies instilling “‘shared values of a civilized social order,’ which includes instilling the value of non-discrimination,” are constitutionally sound and do not run afoul of the First Amendment. Truth v. Kent Sch. Dist., 542 F.3d 634, 649 (9th Cir. 2008) (quoting Hazelwood Sch. Dist. v. Kuhlmeier, 484 U.S. 260, 272 (1988)), overruled on other grounds by Los Angeles County v. Humphries, 562 U.S. 29 (2010).

California has a strong interest in ensuring students have equal educational opportunities and ensuring that concepts of diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility are promoted in all community colleges. See Brown v. Board of Ed. of Topeka, 347 U.S. 483, 493 (1954) (educational “opportunity, where the state has undertaken to provide it, is a right which must be made available to all on equal terms.”). California law declares that no person shall be subjected to discrimination based on various enumerated factors, including sexual orientation and religion, in “any program or activity conducted by any postsecondary educational institution” receiving any financial assistance from the State. Cal. Educ. Code §66270; see also Cal. Gov. Code §11135(a). The State has a strong interest in the continued viability of regulations that promote its laws and policies endorsing diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility, and would suffer irreparable harm if the Court were to enjoin them. Maryland v. King, 567 U.S. 1301, 1303 (2013) (“[A]nytime a State is enjoined by a court from effectuating statutes enacted by representatives of its people, it suffers a form of irreparable injury.”) (internal quotation marks omitted). That is particularly true because the regulations are constitutional as written. See Roberts, 468 U.S. at 624-26.³

On the other hand, Plaintiff alleges a deprivation of constitutional rights, but any actual burden on those rights that might exist (and Defendant submits there is none) is incidental and exceedingly minimal. The Fourteenth Amendment and the California Constitution guarantee all citizens equal rights and equal protection under the law. All the regulations in question do is articulate the aspirational goal of enhancing diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility in community colleges. Any purported impact on speech—particularly speech that comes in the form of statements that are counter to these goals—is far outweighed by the State’s interest in ensuring that community colleges promote diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility. And as discussed above, the regulations do not impose any penalty on Johnson if he chooses to express a viewpoint counter to them.

Finally, the denial of Plaintiff’s preliminary injunction motion best serves the public interest. “[W]hen a district court balances the hardships of the public interest against a private

³ As discussed above (supra at I.A.), Johnson cannot make an “as applied” challenge to the regulations since they do not apply to him. See Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Mahogany Meadows Ave. Tr., 979 F.3d 1209, 1217 (9th Cir. 2020) (“An as-applied challenge, by contrast, focuses on the statute’s application to the plaintiff.”)

1 interest, the public interest should receive greater weight.” Fed. Trade Comm’n. v. Affordable 2 Media, 179 F.3d 1228, 1236 (9th Cir. 1999) (citation omitted). Here, the regulations serve the 3 important public interest of promoting rights that are embodied in the United States and 4 California Constitutions and the Americans with Disabilities Act. See Bible Club v. Placentia-
 5 Yorba Linda Sch. Dist., 573 F. Supp. 2d 1291, 1300 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (stating that “[t]he public 6 interest is clearly implicated” in a case involving the exercise of constitutional rights). There are 7 no grounds to enjoin regulations promoting the First and Fourteenth Amendment rights of almost 8 two million California community college students, particularly when that injunction would 9 unnecessarily require the State to tacitly accept that equity and accessibility do not apply to 10 California’s community colleges.

11 An injunction is unwarranted, particularly when balanced against the alleged potential—but 12 unrealized and speculative—harm that Johnson alleges may arise if the regulations promoting the 13 aspirational goals of diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility are allowed to stand. Johnson’s 14 motion should be denied.

15 CONCLUSION

16 For the foregoing reasons, Chancellor Christian respectfully requests that the Court deny
